

World's Largest Circulation Magazine

August 28, 2006

CURRENT/PAST ISSUES »
MESSAGE BOARDS »
READER SERVICES »

Join AARP | Visit AARP.org | Contact AARP | Search

Money

Health

Travel

Family

People

Entertainment

Lifestyle

Food

Books

Games

Daily Diversions

Message Boards

Reader Services

eNewsletter

Home

Lifestyle

Dream Towns

By Sarah Mahoney, July & August 2006

Print Email Page 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 »

Summer living, all year long

REHOBOTH BEACH, DELAWARE

Sonja and Hoyte Decker

Two years before they planned to retire, Sonja and Hoyte Decker settled on the Delaware coast as their retirement destination. Living in Chevy Chase, Maryland, near where Hoyte worked for the U.S. Department of Transportation, the two had been spending weekends and vacations on the sandy beaches of the Maryland and Delaware shores for years. But they liked friendly little Rehoboth Beach best of all. Just three hours from friends and their daughter in Washington, D.C., it was also reasonably close to Hoyte's two children from a previous marriage.

But finding their retirement house was challenging: Rehoboth Beach itself is only about one square mile, with fewer than 1,500 full-time residents. Housing costs—as in many beach communities—were sky-high. "Houses were just too expensive, even in the late 1990s," says Hoyte, 65, "or else they were just small cottages, or they weren't winterized. We decided against buying an existing home. We had retired without a mortgage—that had always been our goal. And we wanted to keep it that way," he says.

ADVERTISEMENT

Instead, when Hoyte retired in August 1998, the couple decided to build their own retirement home. They didn't waste any time, either. By September they had purchased a lot. By December they had contracted with a builder. And by Memorial Day 1999 they moved in. It's been one long beach season ever since.

The Deckers aren't the only retirees flocking to the area. With a median age of 57, and 38 percent of the population over 65, Rehoboth and the surrounding communities are a retiree's haven. That trend shows no sign of slowing: Delaware expects its 65-plus population to increase 75 percent in the next 25 years.

What makes Rehoboth Beach magical, of course, is the beach. "Walking along in the early morning, it's like having the ocean to yourself," says Sonja, 61. "There are dolphins all summer long, different kinds of birds—it's beautiful. And it means that in the summer we have constant houseguests, which is great."

Why the locals love it

Rehoboth Beach is a bargain

Housing in Rehoboth Beach proper is, admittedly, expensive, but the nearby communities of Long Neck and Milton are quite reasonable (and they're still only a few miles from the beach). All Delaware residents can take advantage of the state's super-low property taxes; plus, Delaware has no sales tax on goods, food, or entertainment. Social Security and railroad-retirement benefits are exempt from income tax, and taxpayers 60 and older can exclude up to $12,500 of investment and qualified pension income. Out-of-state government pensions also qualify for the pension and retirement exemptions.

Lifestyle perks

The Deckers love that they can walk everywhere—whether it's on the beach, along Rehoboth's mile-long boardwalk (circa 1873), or to the area's little boutiques and more than 70 restaurants.

Great escapes

Washington, D.C., and Philadelphia are within a three-hour drive.

Residents love

The small-town atmosphere and the constant events—from Christmas parades to the Annual Chocolate Festival. "Where else would I be able to know the mayor, the chief of police, and be able to be on the beach so much?" says Hoyte. "In Washington there were a lot of things to do, and I did a few. In Rehoboth there are not so many things to do—and we do them all."

Average temperature in summer: 68° F

AARP: Assistance and Information for People 50 and Over

AARP is the nation's leading organization for people 50 and over. Stay informed with AARP The Magazine and the monthly AARP

Average temperature in winter: 41° F

Number of sunny days per year: 96

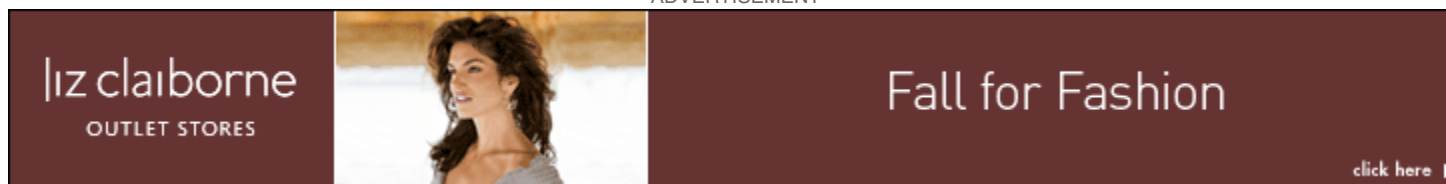

Casual supper for two at Dogfish Head Brewings & Eats: $30

Hot tickets: The Rehoboth Film Festival in November screens about 100 of the year's best independent films, with a special $6 rate for seniors.

Bulletin. Joining online is fast, easy and only \$12.50/year.

 Print  Email Page 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 »

ADVERTISEMENT

liz claiborne
OUTLET STORES

Fall for Fashion

click here ▶

message boards | letter to the editor | e-newsletter | advertise with the magazine | home
Copyright 1995-2006, AARP. All rights reserved. AARP Privacy Policy